Interview Tips

Preparing for an interview

An employer will often interview several qualified applicants for a job. An interview can be a simple, informal meeting between you and your potential employer, or it can be a formal interview between you and a group of people with set questions. To prepare, learn about interviews according to four steps: planning, interview materials, interview, after the interview.

Learn more >

Interview materials

Carry a folder or envelope to the interview that contains:
A copy of your résumé for each interviewer.
Copies of your reference list.

Learn more >

Planning

When you are contacted to schedule an interview, you can ask if there will be a test as part of the interview process. You can also ask how many people will be at the interview.

Interview

Here are some suggestions to help you succeed in an interview:
Greet the interviewer or panel members. Introduce yourself and shake hands firmly. Smile. A sincere smile will help to put you, and the interviewer, at ease.
Stand until you are invited to sit down.

After the interview

After an interview, you may wait days or weeks to hear if you were successful. What can you do in the meantime?

An interview can be a simple, informal meeting between you and your potential employer, or it can be a formal interview between you and a group of people with set questions. To prepare, learn about interviews according to four steps: planning, interview materials, interview, after the interview.

When you prepare for an interview, plan and rehearse answers to potential interview questions. It may be useful to memorize your training, skills and experience, and be ready to answer questions on what you did and how you did it.

Confirm the scheduled interview time and arrive early. Find out ahead of time where you are going and how long it will take to get there.
Drive or travel the route a day or two ahead, at the same time of day as you will on the day of the interview. Set aside at least an hour for the interview.

Exective Board

Jennifer Arends - President

Jennifer leads a team of skilled and creative communications professionals as the ExecutiveDirector of Communications and Stakeholder Relations at 3sHealth. Jennifer is passionate about collaboration and teamwork, and she works hard to build strong relationships with partner organizations across the health system.

Joanne Kozlowski – Past President
My involvement with IABC Regina started when I first moved to the Queen City 20 years ago. As a young communication professional, that volunteer experience introduced me to a wealth of resources and networks to build my career. I am happy to return for my third term on the board and excited for the opportunity to continue to strengthen our IABC Community. …..

Benefits of Being a Member

As an IABC member, you have access to a variety of professional development tools. And for busy professionals, or those unable to travel to workshops and conferences, one great benefit is IABC's library of on-demand webinars. These webinars are available at your convenience and feature top speakers presenting the latest trends and best practices in communication. Better still, they are free for IABC members (or US$100 for non-members). To learn more, visit http://www.iabc.com/on-demand-webinars/.

How To become A Member

Ever wonder where your annual membership fees go and how they are disseminated through the various levels of IABC?
IABC membership is $309.
The bulk of your membership fee ($254) goes to IABC International to cover offerings that are available to all members, like World Conference, webinars, Discovery, resources on the IABC International website at www.iabc.com, Communication World magazine, etc.
The rest of your fees go to your region (Canada West Region) at $20 and your chapter (IABC/Regina) at $35.
Canada West Region is made up six chapters. They provide support to boards through leadership development, professional development, and programs and sponsorship. They also offer professional development opportunities to members through the Silver Leaf awards and regional conferences.IABC/Regina supports about 170 members and is committed to providing quality programs and services thateducate, engage and inform. We strive to provide value to our members through a variety of networking, learning and mentorship opportunities through channelslike professional development luncheons, coffeehouse chats, the Mentorship Challenge, and provide access to the international community of communicators.
